

A Basketball Game

By Leung Ngo Yi

It was a sunny day. Some boys were playing basketball in a basketball court. They played basketball excitedly.

Suddenly, Sam passed the ball to Tom but Tom couldn't catch the ball. The ball flew out of the basketball court. 'Oh! I threw the ball out of the basketball court,' Sam cried.

They saw the basketball hit on a car's window and the car's window was cracked immediately. The boys were scared. Sam and Tom ran to the car owner and said, 'Sorry! We threw the ball to your car carelessly.'

The car owner was angry. Yet when he saw all the boys were very young and they all came and apologized to him again, he forgave them and said, 'Don't do that next time. I can forgive you this time.' 'Sorry and thank you, Sir,' the boys said.

In the end, the car owner forgave the boys. The boys were relieved.